

the v2 your launch deserved.

Your new website shipped this summer and it is a real step up. It also shipped with gaps that cost you trust with the two audiences that matter most: customers deciding where to eat, and operators deciding where to invest. This is a working prototype of what fixing them looks like, built on your own menu and all 120 of your stores.

WHAT I FOUND

ten things on chaiiwala.co.uk today.

Read on 2 September 2026 from the live site's own page source. Every point below is verifiable in a browser in under a minute.

01	The menu shows no prices	The page title promises "Karak Chaii, Street Food, Desserts & Prices"; the page itself contains none. Price is the single most-searched restaurant query.
02	Unfinished pages went live	Careers reads "live jobs are loading shortly... we're wiring this page up". The contact form shows "loading form...". The merchandise link returns an empty page. Coming Soon has a headline and no list.
03	Store data bugs	The Edinburgh store's address renders as the word "undefined". Several stores show no opening hours at all.
04	The numbers disagree	115, 120 and "140+" stores depending on the page. Three countries on the homepage, five on the franchise page. "1,000,000+ cups" on Our Story, 100 million everywhere else.
05	Two loyalty stories	The site sells stamps and a wallet pass. The April blog still sells a points app. Trustpilot complaints are about that app.
06	Heavy pages on a mobile audience	Menu 1.5 MB of HTML, allergens 1.7 MB, store locator 770 KB, ~1.2 MB of homepage JavaScript. Most café traffic is on a phone on 4G.
07	Store pages answer almost nothing	Only "dine-in" under What's Here. No photos, parking, prayer room, drive-thru or accessibility, and no store-specific menu despite items marked "select stores".
08	The franchise page is a headline and a form	One FAQ, no testimonials, no formats, no unit economics, no territory map, no prospectus. This is the funnel that has to deliver a 500-store target.
09	The blog is a migration dump	All ten posts are dated 22–23 April 2026. Nothing since launch.
10	No press or investor layer	£89m sales, 35% growth, a US launch: none of it appears anywhere a journalist or prospective franchisee would look.

THE CONCEPT

one homepage that sells the cup, the story and the opportunity.

A signature moment

A photoreal karak chaii cup in 3D that visitors can drag, with rising steam and the seven spices drifting around it. Loaded after the page paints, so it costs nothing on a slow connection.

The story, told with motion

Your 2015-to-2026 timeline draws itself as the reader scrolls. Counters roll up to 100 million cups and 120 stores. One source of truth for every number, so no page disagrees with another again.

Rewards explained in ten seconds

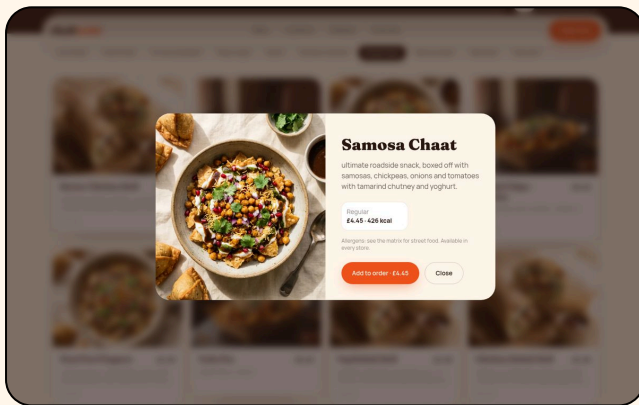

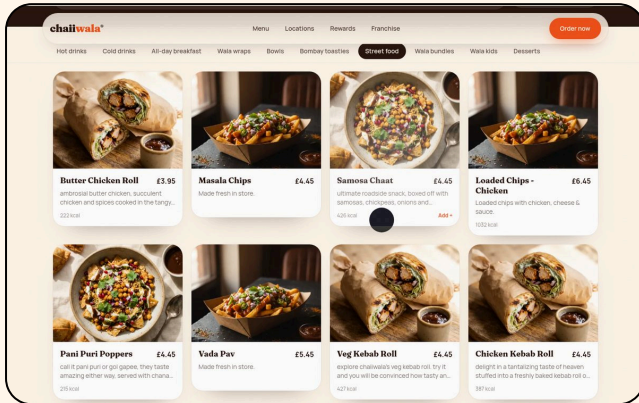

The stamp ladder animates in: five, ten, fifteen. Wallet pass front and centre. The points-app copy retired everywhere.

Find a store without leaving the page

Type a city or postcode and the real stores appear with live open-now status derived from their hours.

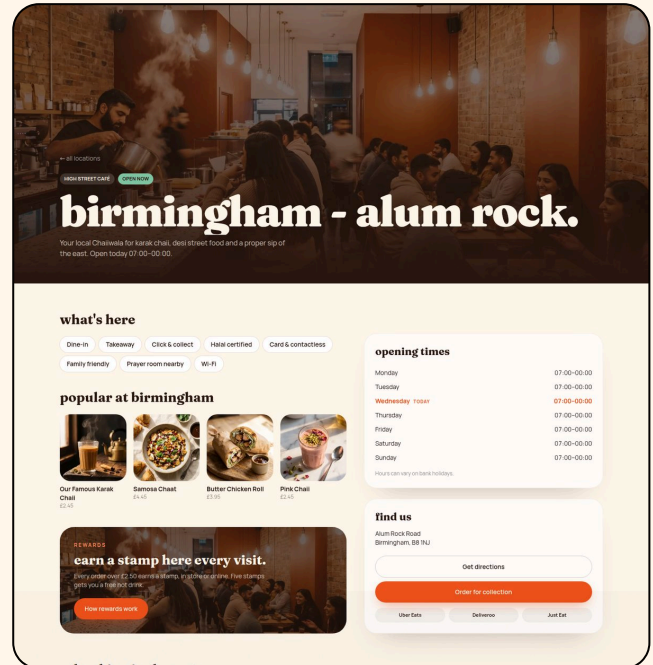

THE CONCEPT

a menu with prices, and store pages that answer questions.

Menu

Every item with its price, calories, veg and vegan badges and a “select stores” flag. Category tabs, search, dietary filters, an item detail view and a basket, all animated. Built to be fed from your ordering platform so prices and availability are per store, never a static page.

Store pages

Facilities, formats (high street, express, drive-thru, airport, services), weekly hours with today highlighted, popular items, directions, collection and delivery handoffs, nearby stores, and structured data so each page ranks for “chaii near me”. No more “undefined” addresses: the data is validated before it ships.

WHY CHAIIWALA

a brand people already know, and want more of.

01

A category-leading brand

The UK's defining Indian street food café, built on 100 million cups of kaaaj chai and the wala wrap. £89m system sales in 2024, up 35%.

02

A proven system

Site selection, fit-out, training, supply chain and marketing, all fitted from 120 UK stores and refined over a decade.

03

A global pipeline

Open in the UK, Canada or the UAE, with the first US store landing in 2026, on the road to a 500-store target by 2028.

FORMATS

four ways to open.

High street café

The original, 1,200-2,500 sq ft, dine-in and takeaway, the community room.

Express

Compact counter format for retail parks and transport hubs. Grab and go.

Drive-thru

Launched 2025. Backburn was first. Grimsby Retail Park is open 24 hours.

Travel

Airside at Birmingham Airport and on the M62 at Claxton Lane services.

THE PROCESS

five steps to open.

01

apply

Submit the enquiry form. We reply within two working days.

02

interview

We meet, align on the opportunity and your territory.

03

site selection

High-footfall sites prioritised together with our property team.

04

fit-out

Our team, our spec, our suppliers. Twelve weeks on average.

05

open

Training on-site, launch day, first sip.

FROM A FRANCHISEE

"The queue on opening day told me everything. People weren't there for a coffee shop with chai on the side. They came for the cup that meant home."

What changes

- The four formats you actually operate, each explained, so an operator self-selects before they call.
- The five-step process draws itself on scroll, with realistic timings attached.
- A franchisee voice and the numbers investors look for: typical set-up, indicative payback, the multi-site path.
- Territories available versus already open, from your live store estate.
- An FAQ that goes past one question.
- A three-step application that qualifies investment capacity before it reaches your team, wired to your CRM rather than a shared inbox.
- Room for a press and investor layer: £89m sales, 35% growth, the US launch.

Why it matters

HOW IT'S BUILT

your stack, kept. your pages, faster.

Same foundation

Next.js on Vercel, the platform you chose this summer. Nothing to migrate, nothing new for your team to learn. Content lives in a headless CMS so marketing edits menus, stores and stories without a developer.

Motion that costs nothing

Every animation runs on the GPU, loads after first paint, and switches off for visitors who ask for reduced motion. Target: largest contentful paint under 2.5 seconds on a mid-range phone, measured and reported.

Lighter than today

Menu and allergen pages paginated and virtualised so nothing ships 1.5 MB of HTML. Images served at the size the screen needs.

THE PLAN

three phases. stop after any of them.

01

DISCOVERY & DESIGN

Interviews with marketing and franchise teams. Audit of the store-data pipeline. Design system and the key page designs, signed off as a clickable prototype you own outright.

02

THE SITE

Every page template, the CMS, all 120 UK store pages loaded from validated data, the menu with prices and allergens, the franchise funnel wired to your CRM, careers and contact finished, migration, launch, training.

03

One brand domain routing to UK, Canada, UAE and US. Store subdomains retired with redirects that keep rankings. Territory map. Ordering integrated on-site once the platform grants access.

About me

I'm Mobeen Ashraf, an independent designer and developer. I build motion-led, data-driven sites for food and hospitality brands, and I built this prototype from your public menu and store data before we ever spoke, because the best way to show what a site could be is to make one.

NEXT STEP

a thirty-minute call.

Walk through the live prototype together, tell me which of the ten findings hurt most, and I'll come back with a scoped plan and a fixed price for the phase you want to start with.
